From the Gentleman's Magazine, for September last.

ITALY.

THE State of Affairs in Italy has remained with little Alteration since the Battle of Camps Florido, the Spaniards and Austrians having rather harassed each other by the Necessity of mutual Vigilance, than by any remarkable Attempts. Perhaps Prince Lobkowitz now sent to supply the Place of Count Traun, whose Age the Queen has thought more suitable to the peaceful Government of Moravia, than the Fatigues of a Winter Campaign, will be more active in his Station, but there is Reason to believe that the Force on both Sides is nearly equal, and therefore nothing decisive can speedily be expected.

The King of Naples is making Preparations, with such Vigour, that he is suspected of intending to declare War in the Spring, but perhaps his Ardour may be again repress'd by the English Navy, which continues to hover over the Coasts of Italy, and has lately terrified the Court of Rome by a Demand of the Confiscation of some Warlike Stores convey'd into the Port of Civita Vecchia for the Use of the Spanish Army.

It is a melancholly Prospect for the Inhabitants of this Country, that they are likely to feel the Ravages not only of a War but of Pestilence, for the Plague still continues to gain Ground, and either by Negligence or Corruption has been suffer'd to infect the first Line of the Guards posted about Reggio. The Manner in which it was transported from Sicily, deserves to be related. A Broker hearing that the sudden Destruction of the Inhabitants had produced an uncommon Fall of the Price of Goods, was so far infatuated by his Avarice, that he went and loaded a Ship with rich Furniture, which he exposed to Sale at Reggio, he was the first whom the Contagion of his Wares infected, and died in a short Time —— How small a Punishment for having consulted his own Profit at the Hazard of Millions.

The State of the other Nations is still the same. The King of Sardinia blocks up the Passes of Piedmont. And the two Fleets of France and Spain are still confined in Toulon by the English Admirals.

From the London Gazette, Sept. 20.

Worms, Sept. 2, N.S. The Right Hon. the Earl of Crawford, who lately obtained his Majesty's Permission to retire from the Command of the Army, set out To-Day from hence for the Hague, where his Lordship will deliver his Credential Letters to the States, and afterwards proceed to England. —— The Reasons, which could induce his Lordship to resign, are rather conjectured than known. The principal thus assigned is, that no Regard was paid to His Advice in Councils of War. That His first Advice was, vigorously to pursue our Advantage; —— His next, to secure a Retreat. But some, invidiously enough, insinuate, that he never was consulted, an undue Preference being constantly given to the Foreign Generals. The following Lines, among many other Pieces of Wit, have been publish'd on this Occasion.

On the JOHNS.

JOHN Duke of Argyll,
We admit'd for a while,
Whose Titles fell short of his Merit,
His Loss to repair
We took John Earl of Stair,
Who like him had both Virtue and Spirit.

Now he too is gone,
Ah! What's to be done?
Such Losses how can we supply?
But let's not repine,
On the Banks of the Rhine,
There's a third John his Fortune will try.

By the Parliet's Vagary,
He was made Secr——y,
By Himself he's P——t M——r made:
And now to crown all
He's become Gi——ral,
Tho' he ne'er was bred up to the Trade.

The last Couriers left the whole Allied Army near Spire, the Duke of Bunswick preparing to defend London against them. Marshal Noailles, (as the French give out) marching to join Marshal Coigni, and to fight Prince Charles, who had got a new Supply of Boats and Pontoons in order to make a fresh Attempt to pass the Rhine on the Side of Hamelheim. The French Generals boast that they have nothing to fear from his Britannick Majesty, having provided for the Safety of the Liner at Lauterburgh, to prevent his entering into Alsace.

LONDON, Sept. 1, 1743.

THE young Prince Augustus of Holstein is elected Coadjutor to the Bishop of Lubeck, notwithstanding all the Intrigues of the French and Imperial Courts.

On the 10th of September, he sets out for Bareith, and Anspach, and to the Advices from Berlin say, he will also go to the Baths of Aix la Chapelle.
